

Product Inspection

Product quality from beginning to end

When you are located thousands of miles away from the factories that manufacture your products, how do you ensure the products are up to your requirements? Inspection.

Product inspection, managed by independent service provider, is a highly effective way to ensure product quality, and avoid the financial burden and brand damage resulting from product recalls.

Quality check at every stage

With inspectors stationed in key manufacturing locations, we offer streamlined product inspection services covering the whole production process, to give you maximised visibility into your products' quality.

- Before production
 - Initial production inspection
 - Fabric inspection
- During production
 - During production inspection
 - Inline inspection
 - Sample picking
- Final production
 - Inline inspection
 - Sample picking
- Retail stores

Initial production inspection

Also called pre-production inspection, this takes place before production kicks off. By checking the incoming quantity, quality, styles, and other details of the raw materials, as well as production equipment, it ensures your production starts in the right place.

Fabric inspection

For garment suppliers, it is crucial to ensure the quality of the main materials – fabric. By using the 4-point system, we identify defects of fabrics to lower the risk of product rejection in later production stages.

During production inspection

With ANSI/ASQC Z1.4 (ISO 2859), we ensure your production is taking place properly, and you will be receiving your products as matching the samples you approved. During the inspection, we can also perform sample picking and on-site basic product testing. In addition, we offer Inline Inspection that provides extra assurance on product quality.

Final random inspection

After completion of production, you can conduct quality and packaging check inspections on finished goods before they go into shipping containers.

Loading supervision

As a final round of inspection, our inspectors will check packing details and quantity against documentation about at loading.

Extra assurance on quality by Inline Inspection

By looking into the quality of semi-finished products and production lines, our Inline Inspection provides a more transparent view of the standard of existing production, and most importantly, how to improve production with insightful Corrective Action Plans developed by our experienced inspectors and endorsed by factory owners.

Quantity check of semi-finished and finished products, by Inline Inspection, will also serve as a good indicator of production status, allowing you to better estimate the completion time of the entire production, and make any necessary adjustments.
